Exception for JIS-Link application

Charges

Summary: During user acceptance testing the JIS-Link Project Team found what appeared to be missing charge information in the JIS-Link database. After researching, the team discovered unmapped (NULL) standard reference codes derived from the local law tables in JIS that prevented charge data for local laws from being displayed in the new UI. To solve this, AOC implemented a change to charge data; when a standard reference code is null, we then look at the source code. This allows the system to display charge information found in the legacy JIS (DISCIS) application. The solution in place: this is a notification and an opportunity for the DDC to ask any questions or raise any concerns you might have.

EDR background: The Enterprise Data Repository (EDR) is a database that holds statewide case and person data. Source data enters the EDR from various case management systems. After the source data enters the EDR it is then categorized as mapped or unmapped. Source data is considered mapped when the source code is associated to a Standard Reference Code.

JIS- Link's Level 01 Database: The JIS-Link database is populated with data from the EDR. We use standard reference codes to determine if the data qualifies, unmapped source data is tied to NULL and the information would not populate the JIS-Link Data Base. In addition to only using data that is mapped to standard reference code, there are qualifiers the data must meet in order to qualify as level 01 data.

Generally, all WAC's and RCW's will be mapped to a Standard Reference Code but local laws will not have the same outcome. Local laws will be almost impossible to accommodate when it comes to EDR mappings because different jurisdictions have the ability to create their own laws (Law numbers and Charge Descriptions). This affects over 35,000 local laws.

Why this is an issue: Charge data is used by JIS-Link subscribers to determine the result of a case, without this information is it impossible to see the result of a case.

How this was corrected in the JIS-Link Database: We started pulling in source data for charges where there was no mappings to standard reference codes. Now we are bringing in complete Charge data.
