INTRODUCTION

As the Court of Appeals noted in Moore,<sup>1</sup> Johnson<sup>2</sup> itself explained how it is consistent with Musci,<sup>3</sup> Iwai,<sup>4</sup> Wiltse,<sup>5</sup> Pimentel,<sup>6</sup> and every other relevant precedent. Neither Fred Meyer nor its amici explain either how a decision that reaffirms all the relevant precedents, or one that follows that reaffirmation, could possibly conflict with those decisions. They cannot.

That is why Fred Meyer and its amici are forced to misstate the holdings in Moore and ignore the record. This Court should deny review.

ANSWER TO AMICI

- A. To the extent that both amici simply repeat some of Fred Meyer's arguments, the Estate has already answered those arguments.

Both amici parrot some of Fred Meyer's arguments.

The Estate has already responded to those arguments in its Answer to Fred Meyer's Petition for Review (PFR).

There is no need to repeat those responses here.

- B. Both amici misrepresent Moore's holding regarding the question of fact underlying reasonable foreseeability.

Both amici claim that Moore eliminates the plaintiff's burden to show evidence that the particular danger was foreseeable to the defendant under the circumstances.

WDTL 3-7; ICSC 2-6. That is simply false:

[T]he jury instructions as a whole must make clear that in order to be entitled to recovery under a reasonable foreseeability theory, there must be a connection between the unsafe condition and the business's method of operation—the unsafe condition may not be merely incidental to the business's method of operation. This required nexus is consistent with Johnson's express reaffirmation of the holding in Wiltse.

Moore, 26 Wn. App. 2d at 778. All amici arguments that Moore “conflicts with” Johnson, Wiltse, Mucsi, and so forth, are thus baseless. Moore requires a nexus.

Neither amici cites the record for its assertion that no nexus evidence was presented here. Yet the Estate’s PFR Answer cited some of that evidence. Answer 11-12 & n. 3 (citing BR at 6-8 (and RP cited therein); BA 5-6 (and RP cited therein); RP 97-123, 129-138, 143, 148-53, 160-63, 167-68, 219-28, 231-34, 240-41, 244-46).<sup>7</sup> Perhaps amici failed to read the Answer.

That would explain how both amici might fail to respond to the Answer’s point that the actual jury instructions given in this case expressly placed the burden on the Estate to make that connection. Answer 15 (citing, quoting, and attaching Court’s Inst. 13, CP 727):

An owner of premises has a duty to correct a temporary unsafe condition of the premises that was not created by the owner, if the condition . . . existed for a sufficient length of time and under such circumstances that the owner should have discovered it in the exercise of ordinary care.

See also, Answer 16 (citing, quoting, and attaching to the BA, Court's Inst. 14, CP 728):

An owner of premises is liable for any physical injuries to its customers caused by a condition on the premises if:

(c) the owner fails to exercise ordinary care to protect them against the danger . . .

Consistent with the above evidence and instructions, Moore also correctly rejected this entire line of argument, holding that here, "there was sufficient evidence for the case to go to the jury, consistent with Johnson's analysis of reasonable foreseeability," requiring the jury to give "equal consideration to actual notice, constructive notice, and reasonable foreseeability." Moore, 26 Wn. App. 2d at 777 n.4. Perhaps amici also failed to read the footnotes.

Simply put, Johnson "establishes reasonable foreseeability as equal to traditional notice requirements and whether it applies is fundamentally a question of fact for the jury.” Id. at 777. But here, the jury was not instructed that it could even consider reasonable foreseeability, so the instructions “were not an accurate statement of the law” following Johnson. Id. at 778. Review is unnecessary.

C. Both amici misrepresent the Estate’s position on the question of fact underlying reasonable foreseeability.

As noted, Moore specifically followed Johnson’s holding that plaintiffs must show a nexus between the specific hazard that caused the injury and the nature of the proprietor’s business making such incidents reasonably foreseeable. Both amici falsely claim the Estate argues either that no such nexus is required or that insufficient evidence was sufficient. WDTL 8-12; ICSC 6-8. Once again, this is simply false.

Neither amici appears to have sufficient familiarity with the record to address the Estate’s actual argument, which is that ample evidence was presented on the nature of Fred Meyer's operations making such hazards reasonably foreseeable, as the Court of Appeals held. This includes (inter alia) the following evidence:

(a) Fred Meyer knows that many slip-and-falls happen in its stores (nationwide, one customer slips every half hour – three times as many customers than its employees who slip, but they are issued slip-resistant footwear) (e.g., RP 102, 148-49);

(b) nonetheless, its employees in this Fred Meyer store are not trained to regularly inspect the aisles for slipping hazards (RP 103-04; 162-63);

(c) yet Fred Meyer does maintain anti-slip mats in the coffee aisle where this decedent fell (RP 89-91);

(d) Fred Meyer also keeps spill kits everywhere in its stores, not just on so-called “wet” aisles (e.g., RP 119, 123, 126-27);

(e) this store was being remodeled when the decedent fell, including the skylights (RP 167; CP 351-52);

(f) this may explain why a shelf adjacent to the water in which this decedent fell contained paper towels, a bucket, and a folded-up “Caution-Wet Floor” sign (RP 167-68; CP 338, 344-49, 353-56); and

(g) the young employee who came into the aisle after decedent fell handed her a couple of paper towels from that shelf and went to get a manager (CP 359-60).

Under these (and other) facts, a jury must decide whether the hazard was reasonably foreseeable to Fred Meyer.<sup>8</sup>

WDTL seems to want to rehash its arguments that this Court rejected in Johnson. WDTL 9-10. But Johnson simply recognized that the Pimentel exception had become the general rule under Musci and Iwai. 197 Wn.2d at 615-18. That is, contrary to both amici's claims, reasonable foreseeability has been part of Washington law for quite some time. Moore changes nothing.

D. Both amici prove too much regarding the new forthcoming WPIC: this Court cannot “approve” of it in this appeal, as it was not raised before the trial or appellate courts.

Both amici correctly assert the Estate mistakenly suggested that this Court might simply “approve” the forthcoming pattern jury instruction on this subject. WDTL

<sup>8</sup> It is also worth noting that Fred Meyer must have recognized a question of fact existed regarding its knowledge of the hazard: it never moved for summary judgment or for judgment as a matter of law.

12-15; ICSC 8-9. This Court apparently does not do that, as the WASH. PRAC. amici cite and/or attach confirms. The undersigned apologizes for his misunderstanding.

But the amici prove too much: if this Court agrees or disagrees with the new forthcoming WPIC on this subject – and the WPIC Committee may well have a draft ready for publication at this point – then this Court will have to wait until the next case to do so: it cannot do so here, as the next iteration was not raised in the trial or appellate court. While it may seem more efficient for this Court to review new pattern instructions before they are published – as it does with Court Rules, for example – this Court instead exercises restraint and waits until the issue is raised on appeal – which may well be years from now.

The upshot is that the nonconforming WPIC used in this case is now obsolete under Johnson (and Moore). Unless this Court thinks its decision in Johnson should be reversed as incorrect and harmful – an argument neither Fred Meyer nor its amici have raised – the propriety of the nonconforming WPIC is simply moot. There thus is no need for this Court to grant review, as there is no substantial public interest in an out-of-date WPIC that correctly has been repudiated under this Court’s own valid and controlling precedent.

CONCLUSION

This Court should deny review.

The undersigned hereby certifies under RAP 18.17(2)(b) that this document contains 1,421 words.

RESPECTFULLY SUBMITTED this 1st day of November 2023.
