A. IDENTITY OF PETITIONER

JESSUP BERNARD TILLMON asks this court to accept review of the decision designated in Part B of this motion.

B. DECISION

Petitioner seeks review of each and every part of the decision of the Court of Appeals affirming the Thurston County Superior Court sentence. A copy of the Court of Appeals decisions are attached.

C. ISSUES PRESENTED FOR REVIEW

Under circumstances in which the trial court sentences a defendant on a burglary charge along with other offenses constituting the same criminal conduct to the burglary, does a trial court err if it calculates that defendant's offender scores without first exercising its discretion in determining the application of the burglary anti-merger statute?

D. STATEMENT OF THE CASE

By third amended information filed February 23, 2012, the Thurston County Prosecutor charged the defendant Jessup Bernard Tillmon with the following crimes out of a single incident on December 27, 2009:

- I. First Degree Burglary,
- II. First Degree Kidnapping against Malcom Moore,
- III. First Degree Kidnapping against Casey Jones,
- IV. First Degree Kidnapping against Brittany Burgess,
- V. First Degree Robbery against Zachery Dodge,
- VI. First Degree Robbery against Nicholas Oatfield,

VII. First Degree Robbery against Aaron Ormrod, and

VIII. First Degree Robbery against Nicholas Ormrod.

CP 12-14.

The state alleged that the defendant or an accomplice committed each of these offenses while “armed with a deadly weapon, to-wit: a firearm.” Id. The case went to trial before a jury with the defendant eventually being convicted on each count with each special verdict found proven. CP 28-37. The defendant then sought review and Division II of the Court of Appeals reversed the defendant’s first degree robbery convictions on counts VI, VII and VIII finding that substantial evidence did not support the conclusion that the defendant or an accomplice took personal property “from the person of” Nicholas Oatfield (Count VI), Aaron Ormrod (Count VII) or Nicholas Ormrod (Count VIII). Id. Although there was substantial evidence that the defendant or an accomplice had taken personal property “in the presence of” each of these three victims, the “to convict” instructions the state proposed and the court gave omitted this alternative method of committing the crimes. Id. As a result, under the doctrine of law of the case, the court vacated these three convictions along with the alleged firearms enhancements and remanded with instructions to dismiss counts VI, VII and VIII, and then resentence the defendant on Counts I, II, III, IV and V given the change in the standard range that resulted from the dismissal of the last three counts. Id.

PETITION FOR REVIEW - 5

The defendant had no prior convictions that counted in his offender score. CP 57. Thus, at the new sentencing hearing, both parties and the court calculated the defendant's offender scores, standard ranges and actual ranges as follows:

| Count | Offense | Class | Score | Range | Actual |
|-------|----------|------------|-------|---------|---------|
| I | Burg 1 | Violent | 8 | 77-102 | 77-102 |
| II | Kidnap 1 | S. Violent | 4 | 72-96 | 174-232 |
| III | Kidnap 1 | S. Violent | 0 | 51-68 | 174-232 |
| IV | Kidnap 1 | S. Violent | 0 | 51-68 | 174-232 |
| V | Rob 1 | Violent | 8 | 108-144 | 108-144 |

The court calculated the offender score on the burglary and robbery convictions at eight points on each count, which reflected a score of two points assigned for each of the four other concurrent convictions. CP 46-56; RP 11/2/12 1-25. Since the kidnapping convictions were serious violent offenses and were to run consecutive to each other under the Sentencing Reform Act, the first kidnapping conviction was assigned an offender score of four points, which reflected a score of two points on each of the other convictions that were not serious violent offenses (two points for the burglary and two points for the robbery). Id. As serious violent offenses, the other two kidnapping convictions were assigned an offender score of zero points each. Id. By running the three kidnapping offenses consecutive, this yielded an effective standard range of 174-232 on each of the kidnapping offenses, which would then run concurrent to the standard range sentences on the burglary and robbery charges. Id.

In this case the jury had returned special verdicts that the defendant had committed each of these Class A felonies while armed with a firearm. CP 46-56. These findings then added five consecutive 60 month enhancements for a total of 300 months to be added to each standard range. Id. At sentencing the court imposed a sentence at the bottom end of each standard range on each count and declared an exceptional sentence under the standard range whereby the court ordered four of the firearms enhancements to run concurrently instead of consecutively. CP 74. This yielded actual sentences of 77 months on Count I, 234 months each on Counts II, III and IV, and 108 months on Count V with all time to run concurrently. CP 73.

Following imposition of these sentences the defendant filed timely notice of appeal arguing that the trial court had erred when it failed to exercise its discretion in applying the burglary anti-merger statute. CP 68-71. A Court of Appeals Commissioner later affirmed the decision of the trial court after which the Court of Appeals entered an order denying a Motion to Modify that decision. See decisions attached. Appellant now requests that this court grant this Petition for Review and reverse the decision of the Court of Appeals.

E. ARGUMENT WHY REVIEW SHOULD BE ACCEPTED

This court should accept review under RAP 13.4(b)(1) because the decision of the Court of Appeals conflicts with the legislative enactments requiring a trial court to exercise its discretion in determining whether or not to apply the burglary anti-merger statute. The following addresses this argument.

Under RCW 9.94A.589(1)(a), at sentencing on two or more offenses, if “some or all of the current offenses encompass the same criminal conduct then those current offenses shall be counted as one crime.” State v. Vike, 125 Wn.2d 407, 885 P.2d 824 (1994). Under this statute, the term “same criminal intent” means “two or more crimes that require the same criminal intent, are committed at the same time and place, and involve the same victim.” State v. Garza-Villarreal, 123 Wn.2d 42, 47, 864 P.2d 1378 (1993). The term “same criminal intent” as used in this definition does not mean the same “specific intent.” State v. Porter, 133 Wn.2d 177, 181, 942 P.2d 974 (1997). Rather, it means the same “objective intent.” Id. The only exception to this rule is found in burglary convictions where the burglary anti-merger statute acts to require the court to exercise its discretion in deciding whether or not to count burglary convictions as same criminal conduct with other offenses. State v. Lessley, 118 Wn.2d 773, 782, 827 P.2d 996 (1992).

The burglary anti-merger statute is found in RCW 9A.52.050. It was originally adopted in 1909 with the purpose of giving our courts discretion to punish burglary as a separate and distinct offense even when the sole purpose of the burglary was to commit a separate criminal offense for which the defendant is charged and convicted. State v. Prater, 30 Wash.App. 512, 635 P.2d 1104 (1981). This statute states as follows:

Every person who, in the commission of a burglary shall commit any other crime, may be punished therefore as well as for the burglary, and may be prosecuted for each crime separately.

RCW 9A.52.050.

In the context of the Sentencing Reform Act, this statute also applies to allow the courts to treat burglary as a separate offense for the purpose of calculating a defendant's offender score even if the burglary and the other offense constitute the same criminal conduct under RCW 9.94A.589(1)(a). State v. Dunbar, 59 Wn.App. 447, 798 P.2d 306 (1990); State v. Lessley, supra. The operative word in the anti-merger statute is "may," which our courts have interpreted to give the court's discretion to apply it both in determining whether or not to merge two offenses or to treat two convictions as same criminal conduct. Id. In the case at bar, the defendant argues that the trial court abused its discretion when it failed to exercise discretion in deciding whether or not to apply the anti-merger statute to treat the burglary conviction as the same criminal conduct with the other offenses.

An abuse of discretion occurs when the trial court's exercise of discretion is manifestly unreasonable or based upon untenable grounds or reasons. State v. Neal, 144 Wn.2d 600, 30 P.3d 1255 (2001). Thus, a court abuses its discretion if it categorically refuses to impose a particular sentence or if it denies a sentencing request on an impermissible basis, or if it simply fails to exercise that discretion when required. State v. Khanteechit, 101 Wn.App. 137, 5 P.3d 727 (2000).

For example in State v. Grayson, 154 Wn.2d 333, 111 P.3d 1183 (2005), the defendant appealed the trial court's refusal to give a DOSA sentence, arguing that the court had abused its discretion. In this case the court had stated that it believed the legislature had failed to adequately fund DOC's supervision of defendants on DOSA sentences. Thus the court would not consider a sentence under this provision. The Washington Supreme Court agreed and reversed, holding as follows:

Next, we consider whether, as Grayson contends, the trial judge abused his discretion by categorically refusing to consider a DOSA sentence. Again, while trial judges have considerable discretion under the SRA, they are still required to act within its strictures and principles of due process of law. While no defendant is entitled to an exceptional sentence below the standard range, every defendant is entitled to ask the trial court to consider such a sentence and to have the alternative actually considered. A trial court abuses discretion when "it refuses categorically to impose an exceptional sentence below the standard range under any circumstances." The failure to consider an exceptional sentence is reversible error. Similarly, where a defendant has requested a sentencing alternative authorized by statute, the categorical refusal to consider the sentence, or the refusal to consider it for a class of offenders, is effectively a failure to exercise discretion and is subject to reversal.

State v. Grayson, 154 Wn.2d at 341-342 (citations omitted).

In the case at bar the defendant was convicted of four substantive crimes committed after he illegally entered a house. The purpose for entering was to commit the other crimes charged. Thus, the burglary had the same objective intent as the kidnappings and the robbery, and it had the same victims. As a result, it constituted the same criminal conduct under RCW 9.94A.589. While it was well within the trial court's discretion under the burglary anti-merger statute to treat the burglary as a separate offense, it was not within the court's discretion to simply ignore the issue. Thus, by failing to address this issue, the trial court abused its discretion to either apply or not apply the burglary anti-merger statute.

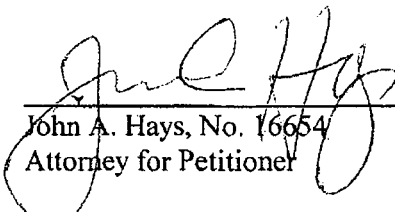

The trial court's failure also caused prejudice to the defendant, given the court's stated desire to give the defendant the bottom of each standard range and then add 60 months for one consecutive firearm enhancement. Had the court exercised its discretion and found the burglary to be same criminal conduct, the offender score on the first kidnapping charge would have changed from four points with a standard range of 72 to 96 months to two points with a standard range of from 62 to 82 months, thereby reducing the actual time the defendant would serve if the court followed its stated intent of imposing the bottom of the standard range.

F. CONCLUSION

For the reasons set out in this motion, this court should accept review of this case and reverse the decision of the Court of Appeal.

Dated this 24th day of January, 2014.

Respectfully submitted,

G. APPENDIX

RCW 9A.52.050
Other Crime in Committing Burglary Punishable

Every person who, in the commission of a burglary shall commit any other crime, may be punished therefor as well as for the burglary, and may be prosecuted for each crime separately.

RCW 9.94A.589(1)(a)

(1)(a) Except as provided in (b) or (c) of this subsection, whenever a person is to be sentenced for two or more current offenses, the sentence range for each current offense shall be determined by using all other current and prior convictions as if they were prior convictions for the purpose of the offender score: PROVIDED, That if the court enters a finding that some or all of the current offenses encompass the same criminal conduct then those current offenses shall be counted as one crime. Sentences imposed under this subsection shall be served concurrently. Consecutive sentences may only be imposed under the exceptional sentence provisions of RCW 9.94A.535. "Same criminal conduct," as used in this subsection, means two or more crimes that require the same criminal intent, are committed at the same time and place, and involve the same victim. This definition applies in cases involving vehicular assault or vehicular homicide even if the victims occupied the same vehicle.

JESSUP BERNARD TILLMON,

Appellant.

No. 44236-1-II

RULING AFFIRMING
JUDGMENT AND SENTENCE

After an appeal to this court, the trial court resentenced Jessup Tillmon for the following crimes: one count of first degree burglary, while armed with a firearm (Count I), three counts of first degree kidnapping, while armed with a firearm (Counts II, III and IV) and one count of first degree robbery, while armed with a firearm (Count V), all of which were committed as part of a single episode. It calculated his standard sentence ranges as follows:

| Count | Offender Score | Seriousness Level | Standard Range | Enhancements | Total Standard Range |
|-------|----------------|-------------------|----------------|--------------|----------------------|
| I | 8 | VII | 77-102 months | 60 months | 137-162 months |
| II | 4 | X | 72-96 months | 60 months | 132-156 months |
| III | 0 | X | 51-68 months | 60 months | 111-128 months |
| IV | 0 | X | 51-68 months | 60 months | 111-128 months |
| V | 8 | IX | 108-144 months | 60 months | 168-204 months |

Clerk's Papers (CP) at 48.

The court imposed confinement of 77 months on Count I, 72 months on Count II, 51 months on Counts III and IV and 108 months on Count V. It ran the sentences on Counts I and V concurrent with each other and ran the sentences on Counts II, III and IV consecutive to that sentence. It also imposed one 60 month firearm enhancement of 60 months on Count II and ran the other four firearm enhancements concurrent with that enhancement. Those sentences resulted in a total period of confinement of 234 months.

Tillmon argues that the trial court abused its discretion by not exercising its discretion under the burglary anti-merger statute, RCW 9A.52.050, to determine whether the burglary was part of the same criminal conduct, under RCW 9.94A.589(1)(a), such that his offender score for Count I would have been zero.

RCW 9A.52.050 provides that:

Every person who, in the commission of a burglary, shall commit any other crime, may be punished therefore as well as for the burglary, and may be prosecuted for each crime separately.

(Emphasis added). It has been interpreted as giving the trial court the discretion whether or not to treat a burglary conviction as part of the same criminal conduct with other convictions under RCW 9.94A.589(1)(a). State v. Lessley, 118 Wn.2d 773, 782, 827 P.2d 996 (1992); State v. Dunbar, 59 Wn. App. 447, 456, 798 P.2d 306 (1990).

But Tillmon makes this argument for the first time on appeal. In order to do so, he must show a "manifest error affecting a constitutional right." RAP 2.5(a)(3). He does not show manifest error, in part because his trial counsel agreed with the State's recommendations as to the sentencing calculations. And at most, RCW 9A.52.050 confers a statutory right to the trial court's exercise of discretion in determining whether a burglary is part of the same criminal conduct with other crimes. Thus, he cannot raise his argument for the first time on appeal.

An appeal is clearly without merit when the issue on review is clearly controlled by settled law. RAP 18.14(e)(1)(a). Because settled law clearly controls Tillmon's appeal, it is clearly without merit. Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that the motion on the merits to affirm is granted and Tillmon's judgment and sentence are affirmed. He is hereby notified that failure to move to modify this ruling terminates appellate review. State v. Rolax, 104 Wn.2d 129, 135-36, 702 P.2d 1185 (1985).
