FACTUAL CORRECTIONS

Respondent Cedars Golf alleges, albeit under guise of argument, that “no constitutional issues have been previously raised at any level.” Answer to Petition at 9. To the contrary, separation of powers was argued at every level, including the Superior Court as follows:

[K]nowledge, skills, expertise, and experience in land use law . . . does not qualify the examiner to interpret and enforce restrictive covenants. Shackling courts to administrative determinations on issues common to land use proceedings would result not merely in unlawful delegation of Superior Court’s power and original jurisdiction, but violation of the separation of powers doctrine.

CP 193, ln. 1-12; citing RCW 2.08.010; WA. Const., art. IV, §4; BGMC 2.10.040 (Ord. 98-020 §1(A) (part), 1998; Ord. 98-019 §1(A) (part), 1998).

Separation of powers was also argued before the Court of Appeals:

We acknowledge that Haslund antedated LUPA; however, LUPA cannot violate the separation of powers doctrine by interfering with the Superior Court’s power and original jurisdiction under RCW 2.08.010.

Brief of Appellants at 12; citing WA. Const., art. IV, §4.

Appellants’ briefing in the present action discloses arguments not raised in the land use proceeding concerning administrative competence, Superior Court jurisdiction, separation of powers, impairment of contractual relationships, collateral estoppel and res judicata.

Reply Brief of Appellants at 9. “Washington’s constitution does not contain a formal separation of powers clause, but Washington courts have presumed its vitality throughout our state history from the division of our state government into three separate branches.” State v. Ramos, 149 Wash.App. 266, 270, 202 P.3d 383 (2009).

Impairment of contract was argued before the Court of Appeals as follows:

If, on the other hand, the Subdivision Act does authorize hearing examiners to determine that restrictive covenants are unenforceable, then it “operated as a substantial impairment of a contractual relationship,” in violation of constitutional prohibitions. Estate of Hambleton, 181 Wash.2d 802, 830-31, 335 P.3d 398 (2014), certiorari denied, 136 S. Ct. 318 (2015); citing U.S. Const. art. I, §23; U.S. Const. art I. §10, cl. 1. The impaired relationship is clearly contractual; and the examiner’s interpretation alters terms, imposes new conditions for enforcement, and lessens the value of the restrictive covenant. The impairment is substantial for persons living in The Cedars, such as the appellants, who relied upon the clause prohibiting further subdivision. There is no way they could have anticipated new legislation in area not previously regulated under the Subdivision Act.

Brief of Appellant at 18-19.

Procedural due process was argued before Superior Court:

In Shoemaker, the lack of procedural rules governing administrative hearing was satisfied by default to the governing statute:

Where a city has not adopted an ordinance accomplishing the purposes of RCW 41.12, the statute itself controls. . . . This court has held that the procedural protections provided for in that chapter do meet due process.

Brief of Appellants at 12; citing Shoemaker v. Bremerton, 109 Wash.2d 504, 510-11, 745 P.2d 858 (1987); and Vancouver v. Jarvis, 76 Wash.2d 110, 115, 455 P.2d 591 (1969). Appellants' brief went on to discuss, by analogy, the lack of procedural protections under RCW 58.17.215 and local ordinance.

Moreover, "manifest error affecting a constitutional right may be raised for the first time on appeal:

RAP 2.5(a) . . . provides that a party may raise a claim of "manifest error affecting a constitutional right" for the first time in the appellate court. It is consistent with RAP 2.5(a) for a party to raise the issue of denial of procedural due process in a civil case at the appellate level for the first time.

Conner v. Universal Utilities, 105 Wash.2d 168, 171, 712 P.2d 849 (1986); citing Esmieu v. Schrag, 88 Wash.2d 490, 497, 563 P.2d 203 (1977). See also, Ramos, 149 Wash.App. at 270 n. 2 (appellant may raise separation of powers for first time on appeal); State v. Aguirre, 73 Wash.App. 682, 687, 871 P.2d 616 (1994) ("appellate courts have an obligation to correct manifest constitutional error"); State v. David, 134 Wash.App. 470, 478-79, 141 P.3d 646 (2006), review denied, 160 Wash.2d 1012 (2007).

REPLY TO RESPONDENT'S "CONTINGENT CLAIMS"

Respondent attempts to preserve "claims made before the Court of Appeals," including attorney fees under RCW 4.84.370. Answer to Petition at 20-21. The Court of Appeals denied attorney fees because the present action "is not an appeal from a land use decision," nor "so devoid of merit that there was no possibility of reversal." Avolio, 48016-6-II, 2016 WL 6708089 at 9. Rules governing appellate procedure require "a concise statement of the issues presented for review," and answering parties must raise "in an answer" any issues not raised in the petition. RAP 13.4(c)(5) and (d). "This [C]ourt has required that the petition for review state the issues with specificity." State v. Collins, 121 Wash.2d 168, 178, 847 P.2d 919 (1993); citing Clam Shacks of America v. Skagit County, 109 Wash.2d 91, 98, 743 P.2d 265 (1987).

Rules of Appeal further provide that "the Supreme Court will review only the questions raised in . . . the petition for review and the answer, unless the Supreme Court orders otherwise upon the granting of the . . . petition." RAP 13.7(b). Respondent's statement of "issues presented for review" fails to mention the "contingent claims," Answer to Petition at 8; hence, the Court should reject respondent's requested "preservation" of issues.

LUPA Jurisdiction versus General Jurisdiction

Nonetheless, we reply to respondent's "contingent claims" in case the Court should consider them. Respondent argues that "[t]he sole jurisdiction for petitioners' claim is under LUPA, . . . thus the courts lack jurisdiction to hear the petitioner's claim for declaratory relief." Answer to Petition at 20-21. Respondent cannot intend that the City of Battle Ground has jurisdiction to interpret and enforce restrictive covenants; to the contrary, "Superior Courts have original jurisdiction in all cases . . . which involve the title or possession of real property." WA Const. art. IV, §6; RCW 2.08.010. "This original jurisdiction includes contract claims." Outsource Services Management v. Nooksack, 181 Wash.2d 272, 276, 333 P.3d 380 (2014).

A conflict lingers between Divisions II and III as to whether restrictive covenants affect title to real property. Foster v. Nehls, 15 Wash.App. 749, 753, 551 P.2d 768 (1976), review denied 88 Wash.2d 1001 (1977) ("The present action is to enforce a restrictive covenant, which has no effect on title, thus a lis pendens is unnecessary.") But see Schwab v. Seattle, 64 Wash.App. 742, 750, 826 P.2d 1089 (1992) ("Division III of this Court has determined that an action to enforce the terms of a restrictive covenant does not affect title to real property. . . . We decline to follow it.")

Superior Courts have original jurisdiction to render declaratory judgments, and to construe or determine the validity of instruments, contracts and franchises. RCW 7.24.010, 020. Superior Courts have original jurisdiction to grant injunctions. WA Const. art. IV, §6; RCW 2.08.010. The present case seeks interpretation and enforcement of a restrictive covenant, including declaratory judgment and a permanent injunction.

In attempt to give respondent's argument a sympathetic reading, we suggest that it refers to the doctrine of primary jurisdiction, which functions "to guide a court in determining whether it should refrain from exercising its jurisdiction until an administrative agency with special competence has resolved an issue arising in the proceeding before the court." Real Estate Brokerage Antitrust Litigation, 95 Wash.2d 297, 301, 622 P.2d 1185 (1980). As further noted by the Court, the doctrine does not decide final jurisdiction, but whether an agency will initially decide the issue. Id. "[J]udicial deference called for in the rule of primary jurisdiction requires that:

- (1) The administrative agency has the authority to resolve the issues that would be referred to it by the court. . . .;
- (2) The agency must have special competence over all or some part of the controversy which renders the agency better able than the court to resolve the issues . . . ; and

(3) The claim before the court must involve issues that fall within the scope of a pervasive regulatory scheme so that a danger exists that judicial action would conflict with the regulatory scheme.

Real Estate Brokerage, 95 Wash.2d at 302-03. In Real Estate Brokerage, powers delegated under Chapter 18.85 RCW to regulate licensing of real estate brokers did not confer competence to resolve antitrust issues. Id. In the present case, RCW 58.17.215 delegates authority to determine whether subdivisions are subject to restrictive covenants that would be violated by proposed plat alterations. Such delegation does not confer competence to determine whether covenants are enforceable by, and against, particular parties, nor grant the relief of declaratory judgment and injunction. “The subject matter of a suit, when reference is made to questions of jurisdiction, means the nature of the cause of action, and the relief sought.” Silver Surprise v. Sunshine Mining, 74 Wash.2d 519, 522, 445 P.2d 334 (1968).

The City does not possess special competence to determine the enforceability of restrictive covenants. To the contrary, agency competence “is limited to an administrative proceeding to determine whether or not a particular piece of property is subject to a . . . land ordinance.” Chaussee v. Snohomish County, 38 Wash.App. 630, 638, 689 P.2d 1084, 1091 (1984).

As in Real Estate Brokerage, “the standards to be applied . . . are within the conventional competence of the courts and the judgment of the agencies is not likely to be helpful in the application of these standards . . .” Real Estate Brokerage, 95 Wash.2d at 304.

Finally, claims seeking interpretation and enforcement of restrictive covenants do not fall within a pervasive regulatory scheme intended “to regulate the subdivision of land and to promote the public health, safety and general welfare.” RCW 58.17.010. This conclusion is supported by the lack of authority to grant declaratory judgment and injunctive relief. “[A]n administrative agency should not be accorded primary jurisdiction if the agency is powerless to grant the relief requested.” Id.

A decision to enforce the covenant will not conflict with regulation of subdivisions any more than the myriad of collateral requirements that developers must satisfy. Wetlands impacts are regulated under the Clean Water Act and local ordinance. Rapanos v. United States, 547 U.S. 715, 742, 126 S. Ct. 2208, 2226, 165 L. Ed. 2d 159 (2006), citing 33 U.S.C. §1344; Chapter 18.270 Battle Ground Municipal Code (BGMC). Proximity to shorelines is prohibited. Chapter 90.58 RCW; and Chapter 18.320 BGMC. Transportation impacts limit the number of units. Chapter 12.116 BGMC.

Geologic hazards constrain design. Chapter 18.300 BGMC. Stormwater regulations limit the creation of impermeable surfaces. Chapter 18.250 BGMC.

In addition, the owners of subdivided property are required to sign a certification of consent under RCW 58.17.165; hence, they must actually own the entire property. Depending upon how the Court resolves the issue of whether restrictive covenants affect title, supra, covenant rights are merely another stick in the bundle of rights that defines real property. Pope Resources v. DNR, 47861-7-II, 2016 WL 7449399, at 4 (2016). There is no significant difference between proof of ownership and evidence that such ownership includes the right to subdivide at proposed densities.

Based upon the foregoing analysis, the holding of Division II in the present case, Avolio v. Cedars Golf, 48016-6-II, 2016 WL 6708089, conflicts with this Court's decision in Real Estate Brokerage Antitrust Litigation, 95 Wash.2d 297, 622 P.2d 1185 (1980).

Respondent argues that “[t]he claim for declaratory relief is not consistent with LUPA timing and filing requirements.” Answer to Petition at 20-21. This argument would appear to apply LUPA procedures to any collateral proceeding after a LUPA petition has been filed. Such a rule would conflict with the decision in Halverson v. Bellevue, that once the City of Bellevue was put on notice of an adverse possession claim, approval of a subdivision plat was improper. Halverson v. Bellevue, 41 Wash.App. 457, 460, 704 P.2d 1232 (1985); citing RCW 58.17.170. Bellevue determined, under RCW 58.17.165, that all parties having an ownership interest in the proposed subdivision had duly signed a certificate of consent. Halverson, 41 Wash.App. at 459. However, this determination did not preclude the court from invalidating the recorded plat because the adverse claimant was an owner who had not signed the certification. Title claims could not be resolved outside of Superior Court; hence, the administrative decision constituted error. By extension, a determination that all owners have signed the certificate would not preclude actions to quiet title between owners, or to determine separate property in a divorce. Although staff are authorized to render determinations of compliance with RCW 58.17.165, they lack competence to resolve title issues, and the administrative judgment should not be preclusive upon the court. Likewise, staff are authorized to determine compliance with RCW 58.17.215, but lack competence to decide whether a restrictive covenant is enforceable by and against particular parties; hence, the administrative decision should not be preclusive.

Attorney Fees

Cedars Golf attempts to “reserve” claims for attorney fees under RCW 4.84.370, or in equity. Answer to Petition at 21. Cedars Golf fails to identify the issue previously adjudicated; however, the record reveals no cause of action seeking enforcement of the covenant joined with the LUPA appeal. Hence, Superior Court jurisdiction was limited by statute:

A superior court hearing a LUPA petition acts in an appellate capacity and has only the jurisdiction conferred by law. . . . Under LUPA, the superior court review is limited to actions defined by LUPA as land use decisions.

Durland v. San Juan County, 182 Wash.2d 55, 64, 340 P.3d 191 (2014); citing RCW 36.70C.010, .040(1).

Moreover, the petitioners do not seek reversal of a “land use decision.” In Brotherton v. Jefferson County, the plaintiff sought reversal of a “final determination on the enforcement of ordinances regulating the use of real property;” hence, “requested relief demonstrate[d] that they [were] ultimately challenging the County’s land use decision.” Brotherton v. Jefferson County, 160 Wash.App. 699, 704-05, 249 P.3d 666 (2011). The present case does not challenge the examiner decision; rather, petitioners seek “[j]udgment permanently enjoining the defendant and its successors or assigns from re-subdividing Lots 1 and 8.” CP 6, ln. 5-6. Unlike reversal of the hearing examiner’s decision, a permanent injunction would foreclose any further division of respondent’s property regardless of whether the present subdivision is completed or abandoned.

Cedars Golf confuses reversal with enforcement of the 1973 Declaration. Just as the developer in Halverson had to possess signatures evidencing authority to subdivide, Cedars Golf must possess authority to proceed with the approved subdivision. The hearing examiner could not confer that authority any more than he could enforce the covenant because neither act is a land use decision as defined in RCW 36.70C.020(2). Land use regulations and private covenants are separate sources of authority.

“[P]arties are entitled to attorney fees [under RCW 4.84.370] only if a county, city, or town’s decision is rendered in their favor and at least two courts affirm that decision.” Habitat Watch v. Skagit County, 155 Wash.2d 397, 413, 120 P.3d 56 (2005). In the present case, the land use decision was not within the Superior Court’s jurisdiction any more than covenant enforcement was within examiner competence in the LUPA proceeding. Only one court has affirmed the decision of the Battle Ground hearing examiner; hence, statutory prerequisites for attorney fees remain unsatisfied.

The Supreme Court in Habitat Watch held “that even illegal decisions must be challenged in an appropriate manner.” Habitat Watch, 155 Wash.2d at 413. The present case does not challenge the examiner’s decision; legal or not, regulatory approval remains final regardless of covenant enforcement. On appeal, Cedars Golf couched its argument in terms of the result that either regulation or covenant enforcement can stop “resubdivision.” However, “affect upon the landowner” is not a criteria under RCW 4.84.370.

Neither does any equitable basis support attorney fees in the present case. “Washington courts traditionally follow the American rule in not awarding attorney fees as costs absent a contract, statute, or recognized equitable exception.” Seattle v. McCready, 131 Wash.2d 266, 273-74, 931 P.2d 156 (1997). The Court recognized four exceptions to the American rule:

(1) the common fund theory, . . . ; (2) actions by a third person subjecting a party to litigation, . . . ; (3) bad faith or misconduct of a party, . . . ; and (4) dissolving wrongfully issued temporary injunctions or restraining orders.

McCready, 131 Wash.2d at; citing, Miotke v. Spokane, 101 Wash.2d 307, 338, 678 P.2d 803 (1984), abrogated on other grounds in Blue Sky Advocates v. State, 107 Wash.2d 112, 727 P.2d 644 (1986).

Only the third exception, bad faith, could possibly apply in the present case. The decision in Miotke noted that no award of fees for bad faith had been approved by this Court, and held that discharge of raw sewage into the Spokane River in violation of a sewage disposal permit, “although possibly exhibiting a lack of concern for the sensibilities of plaintiffs, does not rise to a level of bad faith which would distinguish it from other cases where plaintiffs’ rights are infringed.” Miotke, 101 Wash.2d at 338. This Court has held that the bad faith “exception does not apply [where] the trial court did not find any bad faith conduct.” Hsu Ying Li v. Tang, 87 Wash.2d 796, 798, 557 P.2d 342 (1976). Likewise in the present case, there is no finding that petitioners acted in bad faith; hence, no exception to the American rule applies.

CONCLUSION

Respondent’s statement of “contingent claims” does not satisfy appellate rules for raising issues in answer to the petition for review. RAP 13.4(d). The “contingent claims” were neither raised in the answer nor stated with specificity. Hence, the court should not consider claims which the respondent attempts to “preserve for review.”

However, respondent's contingent claim regarding LUPA jurisdiction identifies a conflict between Divisions II and III regarding the issue of whether restrictive covenants affect title to real property. This conflict constitutes yet another basis to accept review of the appellate court decision.

Neither is the doctrine of primary jurisdiction of any help to the respondent because that doctrine requires agency authority, competence and a pervasive regulatory scheme, which are absent from the present case. However, if restrictive covenants are merely another stick in the bundle of rights that define title to real property, then this Court's holding in Real Estate Brokerage Antitrust Litigation conflicts with the appellate decision in the present case, another basis to accept review.

Respondent's claim for attorney fees must be denied based upon the unappealed Court of Appeals decision that the present action "is not an appeal from a land use decision," nor "so devoid of merit that there is no possibility of reversal;" and upon a lack of finding of bad faith.

RESPECTFULLY SUBMITTED this 30th day of January, 2017.

West's RCWA 36.70C.020

36.70C.020. Definitions

Effective: June 10, 2010

Currentness

Unless the context clearly requires otherwise, the definitions in this section apply throughout this chapter.

(1) "Energy overlay zone" means a formal plan enacted by the county legislative authority that establishes suitable areas for siting renewable resource projects based on currently available resources and existing infrastructure with sensitivity to adverse environmental impact.

(2) "Land use decision" means a final determination by a local jurisdiction's body or officer with the highest level of authority to make the determination, including those with authority to hear appeals, on:

(a) An application for a project permit or other governmental approval required by law before real property may be improved, developed, modified, sold, transferred, or used, but excluding applications for permits or approvals to use, vacate, or transfer streets, parks, and similar types of public property; excluding applications for legislative approvals such as area-wide rezones and annexations; and excluding applications for business licenses;

(b) An interpretative or declaratory decision regarding the application to a specific property of zoning or other ordinances or rules regulating the improvement, development, modification, maintenance, or use of real property; and

(c) The enforcement by a local jurisdiction of ordinances regulating the improvement, development, modification, maintenance, or use of real property. However, when a local jurisdiction is required by law to enforce the ordinances in a court of limited jurisdiction, a petition may not be brought under this chapter.

Where a local jurisdiction allows or requires a motion for reconsideration to the highest level of authority making the determination, and a timely motion for reconsideration has been filed, the land use decision occurs on the date a decision is entered on the motion for reconsideration, and not the date of the original decision for which the motion for reconsideration was filed.

(3) "Local jurisdiction" means a county, city, or incorporated town.

(4) "Person" means an individual, partnership, corporation, association, public or private organization, or governmental entity or agency.

(5) "Renewable resources" has the same meaning provided in RCW 19.280.020.

final plat--Dedication, certificate requirements if plat contains--Waiver

Currentness

When any person is interested in the alteration of any subdivision or the altering of any portion thereof, except as provided in RCW 58.17.040(6), that person shall submit an application to request the alteration to the legislative authority of the city, town, or county where the subdivision is located. The application shall contain the signatures of the majority of those persons having an ownership interest of lots, tracts, parcels, sites, or divisions in the subject subdivision or portion to be altered. If the subdivision is subject to restrictive covenants which were filed at the time of the approval of the subdivision, and the application for alteration would result in the violation of a covenant, the application shall contain an agreement signed by all parties subject to the covenants providing that the parties agree to terminate or alter the relevant covenants to accomplish the purpose of the alteration of the subdivision or portion thereof.

Upon receipt of an application for alteration, the legislative body shall provide notice of the application to all owners of property within the subdivision, and as provided for in RCW 58.17.080 and 58.17.090. The notice shall either establish a date for a public hearing or provide that a hearing may be requested by a person receiving notice within fourteen days of receipt of the notice.

The legislative body shall determine the public use and interest in the proposed alteration and may deny or approve the application for alteration. If any land within the alteration is part of an assessment district, any outstanding assessments shall be equitably divided and levied against the remaining lots, parcels, or tracts, or be levied equitably on the lots resulting from the alteration. If any land within the alteration contains a dedication to the general use of persons residing within the subdivision, such land may be altered and divided equitably between the adjacent properties.

After approval of the alteration, the legislative body shall order the applicant to produce a revised drawing of the approved alteration of the final plat or short plat, which after signature of the legislative authority, shall be filed with the county auditor to become the lawful plat of the property.

This section shall not be construed as applying to the alteration or replatting of any plat of state-granted tide or shore lands.
