I. IDENTITY OF PETITIONER

Petitioner Albert McGregor, the appellant below, asks the Court to review the decision of Division II of the Court of Appeals referred to in Section II below.

II. COURT OF APPEALS DECISION

Albert McGregor seeks review of the Court of Appeals unpublished opinion entered on June 4, 2019. A copy of the opinion is attached.

III. ISSUES PRESENTED FOR REVIEW

ISSUE 1: A criminal defense attorney provides ineffective assistance of counsel by failing to object to inadmissible evidence that prejudices the defense. Did Mr. McGregor’s attorney provide ineffective assistance by failing to object to testimony from multiple state witnesses speculating that he had been involved in numerous other suspicious fires besides the very small one for which he was charged?

ISSUE 2: Police testimony directly commenting upon an accused person’s exercise of his/her Miranda rights violates due process by undermining the implicit assurance that the exercise of those rights does not carry any penalty. Was Mr. McGregor’s right to due process violated by police testimony explicitly informing the jury that Mr. McGregor had terminated a police interview related to the charge at issue by asking to talk to an attorney?

ISSUE 3: The cumulative effect of errors during a trial can require reversal when, taken together, they deprive the accused of a fair trial. Does the doctrine of cumulative error require reversal of Mr.

McGregor's conviction for when errors by the court and his defense attorney worked together to expose the jury to a large amount of evidence encouraged the jury to convict based on factors unrelated to the evidence of the charge against him?

IV. STATEMENT OF THE CASE

William McGregor was asleep at home in the early-morning hours when two house fires occurred kitty-corner from one another in his neighborhood in Hoquiam. RP (11/7/17) 8; RP (11/8/17) 255-56. Mr. McGregor found out about the fires the next day. RP (11/8/17) 260.

The police eventually identified Mr. McGregor as a suspect related to a very small portion of one of the fires. RP (11/7/17) 29-30.

The state charged Mr. McGregor with second degree arson based on the theory that he had caused a small amount of charring on the outside of the door jamb to the garage of one of the houses. CP 1-2; RP (11/9/17) 105-27. The state did not allege that Mr. McGregor had caused the much larger kitchen fire in that house (at 459 Emerson) or that he had anything to do with the large fire in the other house (at 502 Karr). See CP 1-2; RP (11/9/17) 105-27.

Even so, the witnesses for the state repeatedly compared the fires at the two houses, even going so far as the speculate that they had been started by the same person. RP (11/7/17) 32, 41-43; RP (11/8/17) 204-05.

A police sergeant also told the jury that there had been four to five suspicious fires over a six-month period preceding the one with which Mr. McGregor was charged. RP (11/7/17) 32. He said that he had seen Mr. McGregor outside of one of those fires. RP (11/7/17) 32.

The sergeant said that the fires at 502 Karr and 459 Emerson were both suspicious because they both occurred in uninhabited homes. RP (11/7/17) 41. The sergeant told the jury that he suspected that the same person had started the large fires in both houses as well as the small charring with which Mr. McGregor was charged:

My theory would be somebody started 502 Karr on fire, went across the street, started the fire at 459 in the alcove, got it going a little bit, went around to the back. Somebody saw the fires, reported them, the police and fire show up, the person in the back gets spooked ... and leaves.
RP (11/7/17) 43.

The fire Captain also told the jury that all of the fires were “suspicious” because they were in vacant houses and one of the houses had been burned before. RP (11/8/17) 204-05.

Mr. McGregor’s defense attorney did not object to any of this testimony. See RP (11/7/17) 32, 41-43; RP (11/8/17) 204-05. In fact, defense counsel acceded to the evidence regarding the 502 Karr fire at the beginning of trial. See RP (11/7/17) 10-11. This is true even though defense counsel had originally moved in limine to prohibit testimony regarding any of the fires other than the one for which Mr. McGregor was charged, including that at 502 Karr. CP 25.

The state's allegation at trial was that Mr. McGregor had started the small fire in the back of 459 Emerson by using a can of WD-40 as a blow torch. RP (11/8/17) 214; RP (11/9/17) 105-27. The police found a can of WD-40 with Mr. McGregor's palm print on it very near the charring. RP (11/7/17) 12; RP (11/8/17) 168. The police also found a cigarette butt in the backyard that had Mr. McGregor's DNA. RP (11/7/17) 12; RP (11/8/17) 185.

But the state did not claim that Mr. McGregor had used the cigarette to actually ignite the fire because that would have been impossible. RP (11/9/17) 32, 76-77, 105-27. Rather, the state asked the jury to infer that there had been some other ignition source, even though none was ever found. RP (11/9/17) 147.

The police sergeant who arrested Mr. McGregor told the jury that Mr. McGregor had cut off all questioning and requested an attorney once he asked him about the WD-40 can:

POLICE SERGEANT: Then I asked if he had any aerosol flammable liquid containers that might have been stolen and he said no.

PROSECUTOR. And at that point the interview is ended; is that correct?

POLICE SERGEANT. Yes. At that point he asked for an attorney.

PROSECUTOR. Okay.

RP (11/7/17) 38.

Mr. McGregor called an expert fire investigation witness in his defense. RP (11/9/17) 3-84. That witness testified to the requirements for becoming a qualified fire investigator, none of which were met by the police or fire officials who conducted the investigation in Mr. McGregor's case. RP (11/9/17) 10-18.

The fire expert also described the proper process for investigating the source and cause of a fire, which requires eliminating all other possible causes before determining that an arson has taken place. RP (11/9/17) 22-31.

Regarding the fire for which Mr. McGregor was charged, the expert opined that the investigation team should have called an independent electrician to determine whether it could have been an electrical fire. RP (11/9/17) 49-50. He noted that some burn patterns above a porch light and on the flooring raised red flags that the fire could have been electrical in nature. RP (11/9/17) 38-40; Ex. 39. He also pointed out that some of the circuits in the breaker box had been tripped. RP (11/9/17) 40-41.

The fire Captain's report from the day of the fire said that an independent electrical assessment was "pending." RP (11/8//17) 226. But that assessment was never completed. See RP generally.

The jury found Mr. McGregor guilty of the arson charge. CP 35.

Mr. McGregor timely appealed. CP 70. The Court of Appeals affirmed his conviction in an unpublished decision. Opinion.

V. ARGUMENT WHY REVIEW SHOULD BE ACCEPTED

A. This Court should accept review and hold that Police testimony explicitly stating that Mr. McGregor terminated questioning and asked for an attorney violated due process because it was a direct comment on the exercise of his rights to silence and to counsel. The Court of Appeals' decision in this case conflicts with the prior Court of Appeals decisions in Whitaker, Romero, and Curtis. RAP 13.4(b)(2).

The constitution protects both the right to remain silent in the face of police questioning and the right to consult with counsel during such questioning. State v. Romero, 113 Wn. App. 779, 786–87, 54 P.3d 1255 (2002); State v. Easter, 130 Wn.2d 228, 238, 922 P.2d 1285 (1996); Escobedo v. State of Ill., 378 U.S. 478, 84 S.Ct. 1758, 12 L.Ed.2d 977 (1964); U.S. Const. Amends. V, VI, XIV.¹

The exercise of these rights is not evidence of guilt of a crime. Romero, 113 Wn. App. at 787; Easter, 130 Wn.2d at 236; State v. Lewis, 130 Wn.2d 700, 705, 927 P.2d 235 (1996). The state violates an accused person's right to due process by exploiting or commenting upon exercise of those rights during trial. Id. (citing Doyle v. Ohio, 426 U.S. 610, 619, 96 S.Ct. 2240, 49 L.Ed.2d 91 (1976)); State v. Fricks, 91 Wn.2d 391, 395–96, 588 P.2d 1328 (1979)); U.S. Const. Amend. XIV. This is because commenting upon a person's exercise of his/her Miranda rights during police questioning violates the implicit assurance that the exercise of those rights carries no penalty. State v. Nemitz, 105 Wn. App. 205, 214, 19 P.3d 480 (2001) (citing Easter, 130 Wn.2d at 236). Indeed, the right to silence can be “just as effectively [circumvented] by questioning the arresting officer or commenting in closing argument as by questioning defendant himself.” Easter, 130 Wn.2d at 236 (quoting Fricks, 91 Wn.2d at 396).

Accordingly, “[a] police witness may not comment on the silence of the defendant so as to infer guilt from a refusal to answer questions.” Romero, 113 Wn. App. at 787 (quoting Lewis, 130 Wn.2d at 705). If a police officer's testimony directly comments on the defendant's exercise of his/her Miranda rights, a constitutional error has occurred. Id. at 790; State v. Holmes, 122 Wn. App. 438, 445, 93 P.3d 212 (2004).

This is true even when the prosecution does not purposely elicit the comment or exploit it during argument. See Romero, 113 Wn. App. at 794. This is because “testimony surrounding [an accused person]’s silence serve[s] no probative purpose other than to infer that his silence and lack of cooperation ‘was more consistent with guilt than with innocence.’”

Romero, 113 Wn. App. at 794 (quoting Curtis, 110 Wn. App. at 14).

In fact, even comments that are given as unresponsive answers to questions by the state can encourage the jury to convict based on the reasoning that the exercise of Miranda rights is evidence of guilt. Romero, 113 Wn. App. at 794.

In Mr. McGregor’s case, the arresting officer directly commented on his exercise of his rights to counsel and to silence by explicitly informing the jury that he had ended a post-arrest police interview related to the charges by asking for an attorney. RP (11/7/17) 38. The arresting officer’s direct comment on Mr. McGregor’s invocation of his right to counsel and to remain silent violated due process because it undermined the inherent assurance that exercise of those rights carries no penalty.

² This constitutional error requires reversal because the state cannot establish harmlessness beyond a reasonable doubt. Romero, 113 Wn. App. at 794-95; Easter, 130 Wn.2d at 242.

First, the “bell” of such a comment is “hard to unring.” Holmes, 122 Wn. App. at 445. It also puts defense counsel in the difficult position of “gamb[ing] on whether to object and ask for a curative instruction—a course of action which frequently does more harm than good—or to leave the comment alone.” Id. (citing Curtis, 110 Wn. App. at 15).

Second, the untainted evidence against Mr. McGregor was not overwhelming. As noted above, the state was unable to produce the ignition device that allegedly caused the charring or to place Mr. McGregor at the scene of the fire. See RP generally. The investigative crew also failed to independently rule out an electrical source to the fire. See RP (11/8/17) 226; RP (11/9/17) 38-41. The state cannot establish that the officer’s direct

Even so, the Court of Appeals ruled that there was no error in this case because neither the testifying officer nor the prosecutor explicitly connected the dots for the jury by stating outright that Mr. McGregor's exercise of his constitutional rights pointed to guilt. Opinion, pp. 11-12.

The Courts of Appeals have repeatedly held that police testimony directly commenting on an accused person's exercise of his/her rights violates the constitution regardless of whether the prosecution emphasized the testimony during closing argument. See State v. Whitaker, 6 Wn.App.2d 1, 40-41, 429 P.3d 512 (2018); Romero, 113 Wn. App. at 794; Curtis, 110 Wn. App. at 13.

The Court of Appeals decision in Mr. McGregor's case directly conflicts with the Court of Appeals' prior decisions in Whitaker, Romero, and Curtis by holding – for the first time – that even a direct comment on an arrestee's exercise of his/her rights is permissible unless the prosecutor comment on Mr. McGregor's choice to exercise his constitutional rights was harmless beyond a reasonable doubt. Romero, 113 Wn. App. at 794-95.

Finally, the timing of Mr. McGregor's exercise of his rights exacerbated the prejudice. The state's theory was that the person who caused the charring had used a can of WD-40 as a kind of blow torch. RP (11/8/17) 214; RP (11/9/17) 105-27. The officer told the jury that Mr. McGregor cut off questioning and asked for an attorney immediately after he asked him about the use of any flammable liquids. RP (11/7/17) 38. This sequence of events encouraged the jury to infer that Mr. McGregor had invoked his Miranda rights only because he was confronted with the evidence specific to the charge against him.

compounds the error by emphasizing it during closing argument. Opinion, pp. 11-12.

This Court should grant review pursuant to RAP 13.4(b)(2) in order to clarify whether police testimony commenting on the exercise of one's Miranda rights, alone, violates an accused person's constitutional rights, or whether the accused must also make some additional showing on appeal. RAP 13.4(b)(1), (2).

B. This Court should accept review and hold that Mr. McGregor's defense attorney provided ineffective assistance of counsel by failing to object to extensive, inadmissible testimony speculating that he had been involved in other suspicious fires in the area. This significant question of constitutional law is of substantial public interest and should be determined by the Supreme Court. RAP 13.4(b)(3) and (4).

The state and federal constitutions both protect the right to the effective assistance of counsel. U.S. Const. Amends. VI, XIV; Wash. Const. art. I, § 22; State v. Jones, 183 Wn.2d 327, 339, 352 P.3d 776 (2015).³

In order to demonstrate ineffective assistance of counsel, the accused must show deficient performance and prejudice. Id. Performance is deficient if it falls below an objective standard of reasonableness. Id. The accused is prejudiced by counsel's deficient performance if there is a reasonable probability that counsel's mistakes affected the outcome of the proceedings. Id.

A "reasonable probability" under the prejudice standard for ineffective assistance requires less than the preponderance of the evidence standard. State v. Estes, 188 Wn.2d 450, 458, 395 P.3d 1045 (2017).

Rather, "it is a probability sufficient to undermine confidence in the outcome." Id.; see also Jones, 183 Wn.2d at 339.

The presumption that a defense attorney has acted reasonably is rebutted if "no conceivable legitimate tactic explains counsel's performance." State v. Fedoruk, 184 Wn. App. 866, 880, 339 P.3d 233 (2014) (quoting State v. Reichenbach, 153 Wn.2d 126, 130, 101 P.3d 80 (2004)).

Defense counsel provides ineffective assistance by waiving a valid objection without any sound strategic reason. State v. Saunders, 91 Wn. App. 575, 578, 958 P.2d 364 (1998).

Under ER 404(b), "[e]vidence of other crimes, wrongs, or acts is not admissible to prove the character of a person in order to show action in conformity therewith." ER 404(b) must be read in conjunction with ER 403. State v. Gunderson, 181 Wn.2d 916, 923, 337 P.3d 1090 (2014).

A trial court must begin with the presumption that evidence of uncharged bad acts is inadmissible. State v. McCreven, 170 Wn. App. 444, 458, 284 P.3d 793 (2012) review denied, 176 Wn.2d 1015, 297 P.3d 708 (2013). The proponent of the evidence carries the burden of establishing that it is offered for a proper purpose. State v. Slocum, 183 Wn. App. 438, 448, 333 P.3d 541 (2015).

Before admitting misconduct evidence, the court must (1) find by a preponderance of the evidence the misconduct actually occurred, (2) identify the purpose for which the evidence is offered, (3) determine the relevance of the evidence to prove an element of the crime, and (4) weigh the probative value against the prejudicial effect. Slocum, 183 Wn. App. at 448. The court must conduct this inquiry on the record. McCreven, 170 Wn. App. at 458. Doubtful cases are resolved in favor of exclusion. State v. Thang, 145 Wn.2d 630, 642, 41 P.3d 1159 (2002); State v. Wilson, 144 Wn. App. 166, 176-178, 181 P.3d 887 (2008).

In Mr. McGregor's case, defense counsel provided deficient performance by failing to object to testimony that there had been four or five other suspicious fires in the area, that a police sergeant had seen Mr. McGregor outside of one of those previous fires, that the fire kitty-corner to the one for which Mr. McGregor was charged was also suspicious, and that the sergeant believed that the same person had started the two large house fires, in addition to the small amount of charring with which Mr. McGregor was charged. RP (11/7/17) 32, 41, 43; RP (11/8/17) 204-05.

If Mr. McGregor's attorney had objected, the proper inquiry under ER 404(b) would have determined that the evidence was inadmissible. Slocum, 183 Wn. App. at 448. First, the state could not establish by a preponderance of the evidence that Mr. McGregor had been involved in the other fires. Id. Rather, the police sergeant and fire captain merely suspected that the fires had been committed by the same person as the one with which he was charged. Second, the evidence was not offered for any proper purpose. Id. Its only potential relevance was to create exactly the type of propensity inference that ER 404(b) is designed to prohibit. Or, perhaps even worse, to encourage the jury to convict Mr. McGregor because he was potentially a serial arsonist even if they did not believe that the charge related to the charring had been proved beyond a reasonable doubt. Third, the evidence was not relevant to prove any element of the charge against Mr. McGregor. Id. Finally, the risk of unfair prejudice stemming from the evidence outweighed any limited probative value. Id.; ER 403.

The evidence was also inadmissible because it constituted speculation, rather than valid expert opinion. See ER 703; Miller v. Likins, 109 Wn. App. 140, 34 P.3d 835 (2001) (conclusory or speculative expert opinions that lack an adequate foundation is not admissible). But Mr.

McGregor's attorney failed to object on that basis as well. RP (11/7/17) 32, 41, 43; RP (11/8/17) 204-05.

Defense counsel had no valid tactical reason for waiving objection to the extensive evidence speculating that Mr. McGregor was guilty of other un-charged arsons. No reasonable strategic end was achieved by exposing the jury to evidence that Mr. McGregor may have been involved in numerous fires that were far larger than the one for which he was charged. Counsel's performance fell below an objective standard of reasonableness. Jones, 183 Wn.2d at 339.

Mr. McGregor was prejudiced by his attorney's deficient performance. The evidence against Mr. McGregor was not overwhelming. The state was unable to produce any kind of incendiary device with which he was alleged to have caused the charring. See RP generally. No witness had seen Mr. McGregor at or near the location of the fire on the night that it happened. See RP generally. Mr. McGregor's expert witness provided concrete evidence that the fire may have been electrical in nature – a possibility that was never fully investigated by the police and fire officials. RP (11/9/17) 38-41. But the evidence speculating that Mr. McGregor was actually a serial arsonist strongly encouraged the jury to convict him based on that possibility, even if there remained a reasonable doubt as to his guilt of causing the charring on the garage door. There is a reasonable probability that defense counsel's unreasonable failure to object affected the outcome of Mr. McGregor's trial. Id.

Mr. McGregor's defense attorney provided ineffective assistance of counsel by failing to protect his client from extensive, highly prejudicial, inadmissible evidence. Id. The Court of Appeals should have reversed Mr. McGregor's conviction. Id.

But the Court of Appeals, instead, ruled that Mr. McGregor was not prejudiced by any deficient performance by his counsel because the other fires in the area were not at issue in the arson charge for the fire at 459 Emerson. See Opinion, pp. 9-10. But whether Mr. McGregor was actually charged with the conduct encompassing the inadmissible ER 404(b) evidence is inapposite to the prejudice analysis.

Indeed, the entire purpose of that rule is to prevent a propensity inference stemming from the uncharged allegations. The U.S. Supreme Court has described this prejudicial effect as creating a risk that a jury will:

generaliz[e] the defendant's earlier bad act into bad character and tak[e] that as raising the odds that he did the bad act now charged (or, worse, as calling for preventative conviction even if he should happen to be innocent momentarily).

State v Old Chief, 519 U.S. 172, 180-81, 117 S.Ct. 644, 136

L.Ed.2d 574 (1997) (parenthetical in original).

Mr. McGregor was prejudiced by his attorney's unreasonable failure to object to inadmissible evidence because the evidence against him as to the arson charge was not overwhelming but the improperly-admitted evidence created a significant risk that the jury would "generalize" his "bad character" to draw an improper propensity inference or, "worse," find him guilty as a "preventative conviction." Id.

This Court should grant review pursuant to RAP 13.4(b)(3) and (4).

VI. CONCLUSION

The Court of Appeals decision in this case conflicts with the Court of Appeals' prior decisions in Whitaker, Romero, and Curtis. This Court should accept review pursuant to RAP 13.4(b)(2) to clarify this point of law, which is critical to protection of the constitutional rights of accused persons.

Additionally, the issues raised in this case are significant under the state and federal Constitutions. Furthermore, because they could impact a large number of criminal cases, they are of substantial public interest. The Supreme Court should accept review pursuant to RAP 13.4(b)(3) and (4).

IN THE COURT OF APPEALS OF THE STATE OF WASHINGTON

DIVISION II

STATE OF WASHINGTON,

Respondent,

v.

ALBERT WILLIAM MCGREGOR,

Appellant.

No. 51229-7-II

UNPUBLISHED OPINION

WORSWICK, P.J. — Albert William McGregor appeals from his second degree arson conviction and sentence, contending that (1) his defense counsel was ineffective for failing to object to testimony regarding other suspicious fires in the area, (2) the State violated his due process right by eliciting testimony commenting on his right to silence and right to counsel, (3) the trial court erred by imposing discretionary legal financial obligations (LFOs) absent an inquiry of his ability to pay the discretionary LFOs, and (4) cumulative error denied his right to a fair trial. We affirm McGregor’s conviction but remand for the trial court to reconsider the imposition of discretionary LFOs.

FACTS

On October 30, 2016, Hoquiam police and firefighters responded to a house fire at 502 Karr Street. While firefighters were extinguishing the fire, a police officer saw a second house fire down the block at 459 Emerson Avenue. The fire in the house at 459 Emerson Avenue was located in an alcove near the kitchen; firefighters entered the property and extinguished the fire.

While investigating the fire at 459 Emerson Avenue, Hoquiam Police Detective Donald Grossi saw a can of WD-40 in the backyard near the back door of the garage. The WD-40 can had a straw attached and was pointed toward some burn marks on the door of the garage. Hoquiam Police Officer Philip High saw a dry cigarette butt on wet grass in the yard. Police collected the WD-40 can and the cigarette butt and sent the items to the Washington State Patrol Crime Lab for testing. The crime lab found McGregor's DNA on the cigarette butt and McGregor's palm print on the WD-40 can.

Hoquiam police officers arrested McGregor at his residence and transported him to the police station. McGregor agreed to speak with Sergeant Shane Krohn after being advised of his *Miranda*¹ rights. Sergeant Krohn asked McGregor if he knew about four or five suspicious fires in the area that had occurred over a six month period. McGregor said that he became aware the fires at 502 Karr and 459 Emerson after hearing sirens and coming out of his home at 520 Karr Street to see what was going on.

McGregor initially denied being on the property at 459 Emerson. But after Krohn told McGregor that police had found the cigarette butt containing his DNA, McGregor stated that he and his wife had looked at the property because it was for sale. McGregor told Krohn that he and his wife had walked to the backyard of the property through a gate.

When Sergeant Krohn asked McGregor why his palm prints were found at the property, McGregor stated that he recently had some tools stolen from his porch. Krohn asked if any aerosol flammable liquid containers had been stolen, and McGregor said, "[N]o." Verbatim Report of Proceedings (Nov. 7, 2017) at 38.

The State charged McGregor with second degree arson based on the fire at the back door of the garage at 459 Emerson Avenue; the State did not allege that McGregor caused the fire in the kitchen of the house at 459 Emerson or that he caused the fire at 502 Karr Street.

Before trial, the parties noted their agreement regarding evidence of the fires for which McGregor was not charged, stating:

[Defense counsel]: . . . [T]here were other—there are four other fires in the area, in the immediate area of this particular property, 459 Emerson, and we have agreed not to have any reference or discussion about all these other fires, except for the—the address, the 502[Karr Street].

[State]: Right. So, the only discussion of any other fire would be that at the time that they discovered this fire at 459 Emerson, fire fighters [sic] and police were working on another fire across the street at 502 Karr, and one of the officers heard an alarm, and they went over and saw a fire burning in the kitchen area, and then after they got the search warrant, found the origin of the fire that is at issue here. So, the only time I want to discuss any other fire is just to set the scene, they were fighting another fire, and this is what happened. And we are not—there is not going to be any attempt, whatsoever, to try to pin any of these fires on Mr. McGregor, with the exception of the one we are talking about, which is on the west side of the house.

[Trial court]: All right. Sounds like you are all on the same page on that.

[Defense counsel]: Yes.

VRP (Nov. 7, 2017) (Pretrial) at 10-11.

At trial, witnesses testified consistently with the facts stated above. Multiple witnesses testified about officers and firefighters finding evidence of a fire at the back door of the garage at 459 Emerson Avenue after extinguishing fires in the kitchen of that house and at 502 Karr Street.

The State asked Sergeant Krohn to describe his interview with McGregor and Krohn responded:

We had had four to five different suspicious fires over a six month period. And so I asked [McGregor] just kind of a generic, do you know anything about the fires going on? There was a specific fire that I had seen him outside of, not related to—to why he's here, and I asked him about that. And he said he just heard the fire engines and sirens and so he came out to look and watch and see what was going on. And then I asked him if he knew about any other fires. And he said he knew there was [sic] couple down the street, which would be 502 Karr and 459 Emerson, but he denied being there or being on the property of the two.

1 VRP (Nov. 7, 2017) at 32-33. McGregor's counsel did not object.

Additionally, the following exchange took place during Sergeant Krohn's testimony regarding his interview of McGregor:

[State]: And—so after you discussed the cigarette butt, did you discuss any of the other evidence with the defendant that—that was found on the scene?

[Krohn]: Yes. I asked if he had any—or why his prints might be at the scene.

[State]: And did he have any explanation for that?

[Krohn]: Yes. That's when he told me that he had some tools stolen from his porch. And then I asked him what kind of tools and—or what he had stolen and he said tools. Then I asked if he had any aerosol flammable liquid containers that might have been stolen and he said no.

[State]: And at that point the interview is ended; is that correct?

[Krohn]: Yes. At that point he asked for an attorney.

1 VRP (Nov. 7, 2017) at 37-38. McGregor's counsel did not object. After Sergeant Krohn testified that McGregor had asked for an attorney, the State ended its direct examination; the State did not mention McGregor's termination of the police interview or his request for an attorney throughout the remainder of the trial.

Defense counsel asked Sergeant Krohn about his investigation of all the fires, eliciting testimony that Krohn had found the fires at 502 Karr Street and in the kitchen of the house at 459 Emerson Avenue to be suspicious. Defense counsel also asked Krohn about his theory as to the cause of the fire outside the garage at 459 Emerson, and Krohn stated:

My theory would be somebody started 502 Karr on fire, went across the street, started the fire at 459 in the alcove, got it going a little bit, went around to the back. Somebody saw the fires, reported them, the police and fire show up, the person in the back gets spooked—

1 VRP (Nov. 7, 2017) at 43. After Krohn stated his theory of the cause of the fires, defense counsel questioned Krohn about his lack of formal training to investigate fires.

The State clarified with Krohn on redirect examination that the source of the fires at 502 Karr Street and in the kitchen of 459 Emerson Avenue was not at issue at trial during the following exchange:

- [State]: I just want to clarify a couple of things, Sergeant Krohn.
[Defense counsel] was asking you about two different locations. And I just want to make sure that we're clear on what was being asked about what. So I want to—as far as you understand it today, in this courtroom, which fire or which incident is at issue?
- [Krohn]: The one with Mr. McGregor there.
[State]: And with respect to the house?
[Krohn]: It would be on the west side where the WD-40 can was.
. . . .
[State]: And not the kitchen door, correct?
[Krohn]: Correct.
[State]: And would it be fair to say that we're not talking about that because we don't have the evidence to do so?
[Krohn]: Correct.

1 VRP (Nov. 7, 2017) at 55.

Hoquiam Fire Department Captain John Bickar testified about his investigation of the fires in the area of 459 Emerson Avenue. The following exchange took place during Bickar's testimony:

- [State]: And prior to the discovery of that fire [outside the garage of the house at 459 Emerson], when you—so you're at 502 Karr. Now—now you've been alerted to the fire at 459 Emerson. Earlier you had testified about suspicious fires. At—at this point, when you—at 502 was there anything particularly suspicious?
- [Bickar]: Absolutely.
[State]: And—and, in general terms, what?

[Bickar]: Well, something that I realized after we had the fire extinguished that one of my crew was familiar with, that house had been previously burned in the garage area. It would be on the C side of the structure. And I don't recall how long before this fire that it had been burned. But the house was vacant, there was no utilities to it, no power, anything else. So that automatically raises red flags for us.

2 VRP (Nov. 8, 2017) at 204-205. During cross-examination, defense counsel asked Bickar about his qualifications as a fire investigator and about the conclusions he drew with regard to the source of other fires in the area, including his conclusion that the fire at 502 Karr was suspicious.

Defense counsel presented expert testimony from fire investigator John Scrivner. Scrivner testified generally about the quality of the investigations of the fires at 502 Karr and 459 Emerson. During a voir dire of the witness, the State asked Scrivner if he was aware that the only fire at issue was the one located at the garage of the house at 459 Emerson. When defense counsel resumed its questioning, Scrivner testified that a proper investigation would focus on the cause of all the fires in the area.

During closing argument, the State explained to the jury that the fires at 502 Karr Street and in the kitchen of 459 Emerson Avenue were not at issue in the case, stating:

So let's be very clear, we are only talking about that one fire, the charring on the west side of the house in the back yard. So when we heard testimony about the kitchen fire or about the 502 [Karr Street] fire or any other fire, that's just background, that's hear—it's scene setting, it's background, or it's what's muddled up.

But it's—when we're talking about that, we're not talking about that, we are not in any way asserting or even thinking that we can prove that Mr. McGregor had anything to do with that, that's all we're talking about, we're only talking about that one fire.

No. 51229-7-II

VRP (Nov. 9, 2017) at 118-19. The jury returned a verdict finding McGregor guilty of second degree arson.

At sentencing, the trial court imposed discretionary LFOs consisting of a $650 appointed attorney fee and $650 for a court appointed defense expert costs. The trial court did not conduct any inquiry of McGregor's ability to pay discretionary LFOs before imposing these costs and fees. The trial court also did not denote any finding that McGregor had an ability to pay discretionary LFOs on his judgment and sentence form. McGregor appeals from his conviction and sentence.

I. INEFFECTIVE ASSISTANCE OF COUNSEL

McGregor first contends that his defense counsel was ineffective for failing to object to testimony about other suspicious fires in the area where he was accused of committing second degree arson. We disagree.

The Sixth Amendment to the United States Constitution and article I, section 22 of the Washington Constitution guarantee effective assistance of counsel. State v. Grier, 171 Wn.2d 17, 32, 246 P.3d 1260 (2011). To demonstrate that he received ineffective assistance of counsel, McGregor must show both (1) that defense counsel's performance was deficient and (2) that the deficient performance resulted in prejudice. State v. Linville, 191 Wn.2d 513, 524, 423 P.3d 842 (2018). Defense counsel's performance is deficient if it falls below an objective standard of reasonableness. State v. Estes, 188 Wn.2d 450, 458, 395 P.3d 1045 (2017). Prejudice ensues if the result of the proceeding would have been different had defense counsel not performed deficiently. Estes, 188 Wn.2d at 458. Because both prongs of the ineffective assistance of counsel test must be met, the failure to demonstrate either prong will end our inquiry. State v. Classen, 4 Wn. App.2d 520, 535, 422 P.3d 489 (2018).

We strongly presume that defense counsel’s performance was not deficient. State v. Emery, 174 Wn.2d 741, 755, 278 P.3d 653 (2012). To overcome this presumption, McGregor must show “the absence of legitimate strategic or tactical reasons supporting the challenged conduct by counsel.” Emery, 174 Wn.2d at 755 (quoting State v. McFarland, 127 Wn.2d 322, 336, 899 P.2d 1251 (1995)).

At the outset, we note that defense counsel agreed before trial that the State could present evidence of the fires at 502 Karr and in the kitchen of the house at 459 Emerson for the proper purpose of showing the context of the events near in time and place to McGregor’s alleged second degree arson. Evidence of these other fires was part of the “res gestae” of McGregor’s alleged crime, and was therefore admissible under ER 402 because it was relevant to “complete[] the story of the crime on trial by proving its immediate context of happenings near in time and place.” State v. Grier, 168 Wn. App. 635, 646, 278 P.3d 225 (2012) (quoting State v. Tharp, 27 Wn. App. 198, 204, 616 P.2d 693 (1980), aff’d, 96 Wn.2d 591, 637 P.2d 961 (1981)).

McGregor does not challenge defense counsel’s agreement regarding the presentation of res gestae evidence of the fires at 502 Karr and in the kitchen of the house at 459 Emerson but, rather, appears to argue that defense counsel was ineffective for failing to object to evidence outside the scope of that agreement. Specifically, McGregor contends that his defense counsel was ineffective for failing to object to (1) Captain Bickar’s testimony that the fire at 502 Karr was suspicious and Sergeant Krohn’s testimony that (2) there were four or five other suspicious fires in the area, (3) he saw McGregor outside one of those previous fires, and (4) he theorized that the same person had started the fires at 502 Karr, inside the kitchen of the house at 459 Emerson, and outside the house at 459 Emerson.

McGregor cannot show that his defense counsel was ineffective for failing to object to Captain Bickar's testimony because counsel had a conceivable tactical reason for declining to object. Defense counsel extensively questioned Bickar on cross-examination about his methods of investigation and his conclusion that the fire at 502 Karr was suspicious. Defense counsel also presented expert testimony from Scrivner that criticized Bickar's investigation of the fire at 502 Karr. It is conceivable that defense counsel scrutinized Bickar's investigation of the fire at 502 Karr to raise a reasonable doubt about his conclusion that McGregor caused the fire at the garage of the house at 459 Emerson. Because defense counsel had a legitimate tactical reason for declining to object to Bickar's testimony, McGregor fails to demonstrate ineffective assistance on this ground.

Alternatively, McGregor cannot show any prejudice resulting from Captain Bickar's testimony because Bickar did not suggest that McGregor had caused the fire at 502 Karr. And even if Bickar's testimony had prejudiced McGregor, the prejudice was cured by the State's closing argument clarifying that the 502 Karr fire was not at issue in the case.

McGregor also cannot show that his defense counsel was ineffective for failing to object to Sergeant Krohn's testimony. Even assuming, without deciding, that trial counsel's performance was deficient for failing to object to Sergeant Krohn's testimony regarding the four or five other suspicious fires in the area, McGregor cannot show any prejudice resulting from defense counsel's failure to object. Although Krohn stated that he had seen McGregor outside one of the fires, he did not suggest that McGregor had caused that fire and specifically stated that the other fire was “not related to” McGregor’s second degree arson charge. Moreover, even if Krohn’s testimony had suggested that McGregor was suspected to have caused another fire in the area, any resulting prejudice was cured by the State during its redirect examination of Krohn and during its closing argument.

The State elicited testimony from Krohn on redirect that McGregor was not accused of starting any other fire and that there was no evidence that McGregor had started any other fire. And during closing argument, the State clarified with the jury that only the fire outside of the garage at 459 Emerson was at issue and that any discussion of other fires in the area was merely background information. In light of the State’s redirect examination of Krohn and its closing argument, McGregor cannot show that the outcome of his trial would have differed had defense counsel objected to Krohn’s testimony. Accordingly, he fails to show ineffective assistance of counsel on this ground.

McGregor also fails to show that defense counsel was ineffective for failing to object to Sergeant Krohn’s testimony that he had suspected the same person caused the fires at 502 Karr and at 459 Emerson because it relates to the defense strategy of undermining Sergeant’s Krohn’s qualifications as a fire investigator and the conclusions he drew as part of his investigation. Immediately after eliciting Krohn’s opinion as to the cause of the fires, defense counsel asked Krohn about his lack of formal training to investigate fires and questioned his conclusion as to the cause of the fire at issue. Additionally, any prejudice resulting from Krohn’s testimony was cured by the State’s redirect examination of Krohn and its closing argument as discussed above.

II. COMMENT ON RIGHT TO SILENCE AND RIGHT TO COUNSEL

Next, McGregor contends that Sergeant Krohn's testimony that he had terminated the police interview by requesting an attorney was an improper comment on the exercise of his Miranda rights, including his right to silence and right to counsel. Because Krohn's brief reference to McGregor's request for an attorney did not amount to an improper comment on the exercise of his Miranda rights, we disagree.

The Fifth Amendment to the United States Constitution and article I, section 9 of the Washington Constitution guarantee a defendant the right to be free from compelled self-incrimination, including a right to silence. State v. Knapp, 148 Wn. App. 414, 420, 199 P.3d 505 (2009). In Washington, a defendant's right to silence applies both before and after the defendant's arrest. State v. Easter, 130 Wn.2d 228, 235-41, 922 P.2d 1285 (1996). In the post-arrest context, which is applicable here, a comment on the defendant's silence violates due process. State v. Romero, 113 Wn. App. 779, 786-87, 54 P.3d 1255 (2002)). "[C]omments on a defendant's exercise of his or her Miranda rights violates due process . . . because it undermines the implicit assurance that the exercise of Miranda carries no penalty." State v. Nemitz, 105 Wn. App. 205, 214, 19 P.3d 480 (2001).

In accord with the right to silence and guarantee of due process, a police witness "may not comment on the silence of the defendant so as to infer guilt from a refusal to answer questions." State v. Lewis, 130 Wn.2d 700, 705, 927 P.2d 235 (1996). But "a mere reference to silence which is not a 'comment' on the silence is not reversible error absent a showing of prejudice." Lewis, 130 Wn.2d at 706-07 (quoting Tortolito v. State, 901 P.2d 387, 390 (Wyo. 1995)); State v. Sweet, 138 Wn.2d 466, 481, 980 P.2d 1223 (1999). "[C]omment" means that the State uses the defendant's silence to suggest to the jury that the refusal to talk is an admission of guilt. Lewis, 130 Wn.2d at 707.

Here, Sergeant's Krohn's brief reference to McGregor's termination of the police interview by requesting an attorney did not amount to a comment on the exercise of his Miranda rights because it did not suggest that McGregor's exercise of those rights was an admission of guilt. The State did not refer to McGregor's termination of the police interview or request for an attorney throughout the course of the trial and did not argue that McGregor's exercise of Miranda rights was evidence of his guilt. Because Krohn's testimony did not amount to a comment on McGregor's exercise of Miranda rights and because the State did not suggest that the jury could infer McGregor's guilt based on his exercise of Miranda rights, his claim of a due process violation fails.

III. DISCRETIONARY LFOs

Next, McGregor contends that the trial court erred by imposing discretionary LFOs absent any inquiry of his ability to pay those LFOs. We agree.

Here, the trial court not only failed to conduct an inquiry of McGregor's ability to pay, it also failed to denote any finding that he had the ability to pay LFOs on his judgment and sentence. The trial court erred by imposing discretionary LFOs absent this required finding. See State v. Blazina, 182 Wn.2d 827, 837-38, 344 P.3d 680 (2015) (citing former RCW 10.01.160(3) (2015)). Accordingly, we remand for the trial court to reconsider the imposition of LFOs. Although McGregor challenges only the imposition of the $650 appointed attorney fee and the $650 cost for an appointed defense expert, on remand the trial court should reconsider the imposition of all the LFOs in light of the 2018 amendments to the LFO provisions, LAWS OF 2018, ch. 269, and State v. Ramirez, 191 Wn.2d 732, 426 P.3d 714 (2018).

IV. CUMULATIVE ERROR

Finally, McGregor contends that cumulative error denied his right to a fair trial. We disagree. The cumulative error doctrine applies when several errors occurred at the trial level, none of which alone warrants reversal, but the combined errors effectively denied the defendant a fair trial. State v. Hodges, 118 Wn. App. 668, 673-74, 77 P.3d 375 (2003). Because McGregor has shown only one error, which occurred at sentencing when the trial court imposed discretionary LFOs absent a finding that he had the ability to pay those LFOs, the cumulative error doctrine does not apply.

Accordingly, we affirm McGregor's conviction but remand for the trial court to reconsider the imposition of all discretionary LFOs.

A majority of the panel having determined that this opinion will not be printed in the Washington Appellate Reports, but will be filed for public record in accordance with RCW 2.06.040, it is so ordered.
