

Faulk, Camilla

From: David Cullen [d.cullen@olywa.net]
Sent: Wednesday, December 17, 2008 9:44 AM
To: Faulk, Camilla

A formula for disaster. Already the courts are clogged with pro se litigants, the judges are afraid to require them to follow the rules, and the results are damaging to those clients who are paying hard earned money to have their disputes litigated because of the delays and disruptions caused thereby. What exactly are Legal Technicians going to do? Encourage pro se's to file ever more paperwork? Are Legal Technicians are going to be unsupervised paralegals? Or just anyone who wants to "help" those who "can't afford a lawyer"?

Please register my unequivocal No.

David D. Cullen
WSBA 5422

IRS CIRCULAR 230 DISCLOSURE:

To ensure compliance with requirements imposed by the IRS, we inform you that any U.S. tax advice contained in this communication (including any attachments) is not intended or written to be used, and cannot be used, for the purpose of (i) avoiding penalties under the Internal Revenue Code or (ii) promoting, marketing or recommending to another party any transaction or matter addressed herein.

The information contained in this communication is confidential, may be attorney-client privileged, may constitute inside information, and is intended only for the use of the addressee. Unauthorized use, disclosure or copying of this communication or any part thereof is strictly prohibited.