I am questioning the need for this rule change. All continuing education, whether with the Guardian Institute, WAPG or the NGA has been viral. The Guardian Institute is offering a hybrid in-person (if allowed by the county)/virtual conference in September. I'd be interested in the complaints that the CPGB has received. Are CPGs saying that their business has suffered? I can't speak for anyone else but Bridge Builders, Ltd only had a slight slowdown in March and April. Business has been picking up rapidly since then. GPGs are essential, so other than not being able to physically visit clients, not much has changed other than spending more phone time with facility staff checking up on clients as best we can. As to the cost of CE, the Guardian Institute offers partial scholarships to those who might be struggling. For our September conference, we have received only one application for a scholarship out of five available. Maybe there are concerned that I have not experienced but unless I know what they are, it's difficult to have any other opinion.
