Journalist Law School Fellowship

Journalist Law School is a program supported by ABOTA and held at Loyola Law School. This program is designed to improve the quality of legal reporting by condensing core law school subjects into a four-day program for journalists. The program aims to equip journalists with a better understanding of legal concepts and resources to verify the accuracy of their reporting.

If you are interested in more information about the Fellowship, please contact Nicole Battles at nicole@wa-abota.org
