Part II: Narrative Explanation

This bill modifies several sections in the Washington Industrial Safety and Health Act RCW 49.17 expanding worker protections and allowing an employer to file in Superior Court to contest an order restraining any condition of employment issued by the Department of Labor and Industries.

This bill would add a new section to RCW 51.04 authorizing, in the event of a state of emergency as defined in RCW 43.06.010, a safety grant program that would provide one-time grants to employers to purchase safety equipment required to meet health and safety standards related to the emergency for the purpose of resuming normal operations.

Part II.A – Brief Description of what the Measure does that has fiscal impact on the Courts

Section 1(3) – Would allow for an employer to contest an order restraining any condition of employment issued under subsection (1) of this section to file an application to the Superior Court of the county where condition of employment exists.

Section 2(3) – Would require that an employer notify Labor and Industries within fifteen working days from the notification of penalty assessment its wishes to appeal the assessment of penalty. If the employer fails to notify the director, the assessment of penalty shall be the final order and not subject to review by any court or agency.

Section 3(5) – Would allow an employee to file in Superior Court on their own behalf when the director finds there is insufficient evidence to determine that there has been a violation of the provisions of this section. The Superior Court would have jurisdiction to order all appropriate relief to the employee if the court finds in favor of the employee.

II.B - Cash Receipt Impact

None

II.C – Expenditures

This bill would not have adverse impact on the courts. There could be a small increase in Superior Court Case filings. These impacts could be managed within existing resources.
